Stands at the Head

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Buford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits." Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at Burrow, Martin & Co's Drug Store.

THE NEWS OF SOCIETY

Events and Movements Which Have Made Up the Past Week.

SEVERAL PLEASANT OUTING PARTIES

Mr. J. Iredell Jenkins Entertains His Friends at the Country Club—Mr. H. B. Goodridge's Party to Ocean View—Coming Nuptial Events of Interest in Norfolk.

Summer pastimes have really begun in earnest, as is evidenced by the two principal events of the past week. People are also beginning to go away for the heated season to country homes among the mountains, or near the seashore, the summer guests are also beginning to arrive in the city.

The boys and the girls too are coming home from their schools by every train.

The reception at the Country Club last evening was a very pleasant event, and was enjoyed by many of the members and their guests.

Mr. A. B. Seldner left for Philadelphia last evening.

Lieutenant Cooke and his bride, who was Miss Freeman, of this city, paid a short visit to Norfolk last week.

Miss Wendling, of Washington city, is the guest of Mrs. Joseph T. Allyn, on Bute street.

Walker, Brambleton; Truett & Smith, Berkley.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Col. William Lamb's, Warm Words of Praise for His Gallant Enemy.

SERVICES OF GEN. NEWTON M. CURTIS

His Lion-Like Courage and Reckless Bravery at the Capture of Fort Fisher—Graphic Description of the Famous Fight—Testimonial to the President.

(New York Sun.)

Colonel William Lamb, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Virginia, who was the Confederate commander of Fort Fisher, filed a statement with President McKinley to-day that is an important contribution to the discussion over the Fort Fisher fight between General Curtis, of New York, and General Ames, of Massachusetts. Colonel Lamb appeals for the recognition of General Curtis' services to his country and says:

"As the Confederate commander of Fort Fisher, I was witness to the skill, the courage, and the inestimable services of General Newton M. Curtis to his country. My fort commanded the last gateway to the South from the outer world, and for months the supplies of arms, ammunition, food and clothing had successfully passed the largest blockading fleet the world had ever witnessed, supplying the Confederate forces with absolute necessities. So important was this gateway to the South—important as the capture of my fort, I learned that the published records of the War Department have since proved, that it is due to the patriotic pertinacity of General Curtis that we attempt to capture his Southern stronghold was not abandoned, with all the serious consequences of such a course, and that the former expedition, recuperated and strengthened, was sent back with such celerity, that I had had no adequate time to repair my damage, and instead of being notified of the impending blow, I had to announce to General Bragg the reappearance of the American armada before my works."

Colonel Lamb then describes the condition of the battle, and adds:

"Seizing the flag of his old regiment, the 42d New York, General Curtis led the desperate charge, and before he planted it triumphantly upon the ramparts he had received four serious wounds, my riflemen killing or wounding every officer of that gallant regiment. Simultaneous with the capture of my left salient, the sailors and marines were routed with disastrous loss, despite the entreaties of the fearless officers who led the naval column. Then all of my force not stationed at the guns were hurled upon Curtis, and the longest and bloodiest hand-to-hand fight of our war followed, its horrors being enhanced by the fatal fire of the navy into my ranks. So unexpected and desperate was the resistance of my garrison, expected by me to be broken by three heavy sea-faring guns upon the head-erails in the fort, that those not led by Curtis, instead of overwhelming us with superior numbers, halted and commenced to intrench. Curtis still led his men upon the ramparts, assisted by the navy, gradually surrounding us and pushing us up to our works until, receiving two frightful wounds, losing an eye and a portion of his scalp at the base of his brain, he was dragged out for dead, but not until he had refused to retire and had rendered the recovery of the fort by its garrison impossible, without the assistance of Bragg, which never occurred."

"While I would not detract from the ability or courage of any of the officers of my army or navy, who captured my fort and garrison on the evening of January 15th, 1865, yet I feel, in common with my officers and men, that to General Curtis, whose giant form towering above his men made him a conspicuous object to his foe, more than to any one else on the Federal side, is due the entrance of the works and their fall after six hours' hard fighting on that eventful winter night. To the persistency of General Curtis and to his courage are due the earlier termination of our dreary struggle by many months, with all the lives saved and human misery stopped, and for this alone, bearing his Congressional medal (the Victoria Cross of the Federal army), he is deserving of the highest recognition at our hands. "I have come to you Mr. President, of my own volition. The only intimation General Curtis had of my intention was when I had him asked if he desired anything at the hands of your administration, to whose success in November last he so zealously contributed, when he modestly said if you should see fit to make him a director of the Pacific road it would be most acceptable. Before calling on you I asked my friend, Senator Platt, of New York, if it would be agreed to him to have me ask a position for one of his constituents, and he said he would be pleased to have General Curtis recognized in any way. But I do not think you should charge the appointment of Gen. Curtis even to the great State of New York; he belongs and should be charged to the whole Union, which he did so much to preserve."

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted and feeble prevail, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and driving the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at Burrow, Martin & Co's Drug Store.

Analysis of a Correction.

In The Virginian of June 17th, 1897, we find a very feeble attempt to correct a news item sent in by one of the members of our newly organized Sunday school, which occurred last Sunday on Moran and Eleventh streets, at a table prepared for that purpose.

The correction appears from the pen of Rev. E. E. Dudley, pastor of Central Avenue Baptist church. Now, reader, please look up Tuesday and Thursday's papers and compare the two items and you will find them verbatim. Then read his explanatory note applying your analyzer and you will find altogether an impressive impression, e. i., that all may understand we wish to explain that there is but one Baptist church in Atlantic City Ward—the Central Avenue Baptist church.

Notice above and you will see that the writer said nothing about a Baptist church, but simply the Baptists. This is a common expression the world over and can safely be said any time without implying Central Avenue. In view of the fact that there are other Baptists. In this movement last Sunday there were at least three Baptist churches represented, besides the dozen lettered members Bro. Dudley referred to. They all live in Atlantic City Ward and the reporter simply stated the truth, and the truth will make us free. So far as the one church is concerned we will leave that bone for the intelligent public to pick.

Now, Bro. Dudley, I trust that you will not feel that more than one prosperous flock is at all disgraced by the good brother employing the term—the Baptists of Atlantic City Ward, No. J. F. LEIGHTON, Clerk of Liberty Baptist Church.
